The Conning Tower

THE "SISSY" IN BATTLE

Yes, Willy's been qualified for the Cross-Not the wooden one, thank God, but the Croix de Guerre-And every one around the club is wondering How he ever did it.

"One of the coolest under fire," the General said, "Courageous, and untiring in his ministrations

Why, when he was at school he used to shy When some big bully of a football player Elbowed him off the walk with "S'lute there, Prep!"

And, when the Middlers hazed him, he slunk off And cried!

"Willy-boy," "Sis," they called him, just because He'd rather read the works of Matthew Arnold-Than those of Kipling or of Walter Camp, Or, maybe, Ralph D. Paine.

He was a freak, in sooth; he never wore The collars which the college fellows sported (And which, of course, we aped.)

In fact, now come to think of it, I don't believe He ever even wore garters, Because his socks were always 'round his ankles,

And he'd reach down and pull them up in chapel, In class, or anywhere.

He was a freak, I said; he went in for debating, For essay writing, and other unmanly things-"Twas rumored that he once wrote poetry And had it printed! And he took a prize in Greek!

We knew he never would amount to much-He didn't care for girls, he never smoked In dormitories after lights were out; He never dared to sneak down the fire-escape At night, and take the trolley ride to Lawrence To sit in at the Dutchman's. But yet-there it is in the paper-

He's been cited in orders, mentioned in dispatches For bravery under fire-While the big football back who bullied him Has been rejected by the army doctors

For a weak heart. And I ran into one of those Middlers who hazed him

Only the other day, and he was doing Not a thing for his country, or its allies

It is a great war, isn't it?

Silk Stockings-They Carried -Filled With Money by 5,000 Fans

A team from the Friars' Club played a ball game at the Polo Grounds yesterday with a team from the "Ziegfeld Follies," but the whole thing was the result of a misunderstanding. Captain Marty Sampter marched his fellow Friars onto the field in the firm conviction that the opposing battery was to be composed of Gus Van and Joe Schenck, who also do a little singing.

But Ned Wayburn played a cruel trick. He sent Van and Schenck to the coaching lines and trotted out a pair named Stringman and Ditzell to do the battery work. Stringman and Ditzell, it turned out, were not very good singers, but they didn't try to sing. They merely whitewashed the Friars for nine innings, incidentally striking out most Along about the middle of the aftercoon Captain Sampter said he was sure that Stringman and Ditzell had once played for Montreal and that he would appeal the game to the highest court, if necessary. He gave it as his opinion that the "Follies" battery should have been Rock and White.

5,000 See Game

About 5,000 persons, mostly professional, turned out to assist "The Sun's" tobacco fund by watching Messrs. Stringman and Ditzell play ball. They also saw Friar Jim Corbett do the best also saw Friar Jim Corbett do the best piece of umpiring that he has done for fifteen years. Jim's station was third base, and he never had a decision to make. Mike Donlin, stationed at first, had to work a little harder.

During the week probably 1,500 children will be started off to the country for fortnight vacations. It is not only because the number of children to be sent out is large that this is to be the fund's busiest week, however, for at least one other week this year has seen more than 1,500 children sent away.

What makes this a busy week is the fact that the 1,500 are to be sent away from the city in comparatively small groups, most of the parties numbering less than fifty children each.
